The Nuptials of Jim and Bet.

In Sumner county, Tenn., lives an Irish magistrate, a man of liberal education and a full quota of that mother wit for which his people is noted. A short time ago a negro pair named Jim and Bet called upon the 'squire to be united "for better or worse," probably the latter. Having had some notice of their coming, he prepared and actually used this unique ceremony:

Jim, will you take Bet
Without any regret,
To love and to cherish,
Till one of you perish
And is laid under the sod,
So help you God?

Jim, having given the affirmative answer, the 'squire turned to Bet:

Bet, will you take Jim,
And cling to him,
Both out and in
Through thick and thin,
Holding him to your heart,
Till death do part?

Bet modestly acquiesced, and the newly-married couple was dismissed with this "top over all:"

"Through life's alternate joy and strife,
I now pronounce you man and wife.
Go up life's hill till you get to the level,
And salute your bride, you dusky devil."

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They do the work whenever you require their aid. MORE RAILROAD TALK.

Eastern Kentucky About to be Given Opportunity to Develop Coal and Timber Resources.

[Louisville Herald.]

Railroad men and others interested in the development of Eastern Kentucky are unanimous in the declaration that there is more talk concerning new lines into that territory than in years. If 1910 sees a continuance of favorable business conditions, they add, it will not be a matter of surprise to find many lines criss-crossing the virgin timber and coal section embraced in the territory between the Cumberland Mountains and the Big Sandy river on the east and the blue grass on the west.

There is a fair third of the state—and from the standpoint of natural resources the richest third of all—without railroad facilities of any kind. The thirteen counties of Elliot, Lawrence, Morgan, Magoffin, Knott, Letcher, Perry, Owsley, Jackson, Clay, Leslie and Harlan, not to mention half a dozen others whose territory is barely touched by rail lines, haven't a mile of rail among them, though the timber and coal wealth which they possess is probably larger than that of any other section of equal extent in the whole south.

If you will look at any good railroad map of the state, you will note that projected from the terminals of lines now in operation are several dotted lines indicating railroads which have been proposed and for which preliminary surveys have in most instances already been made. From Beattyville to Pineville is a line through Owsley, Clay and Knox counties.

From Jackson to Whitesburg is traced one which touches Breathitt, Perry and Letcher counties and then continues through the mountains to Big Stone Gap, Va. Beattyville to the Big Sandy river is another prospect, which it was intended to run through Lee, Magoffin, Wolfe, Floyd and Pike counties. Other shorter but nevertheless important lines have also been discussed at various times.

The railroad companies which are looked to for the major part of the development of Eastern Kentucky are the Louisville and Nashville, the Queen and Cresent (a part of the Southern Railway system), and the Chesapeake and Ohio, which is generally believed to be controlled by the Pennsylvania. The Lexington and Eastern and the Louisville and Atlantic are not in a position to do much developing unless they are aided by one of the stronger lines mentioned.

It is also current gossip that the Lexington and Eastern is intending to extend from Jackson, its present terminal, to the mountains, going by way of Hindman to Whitesburg. This road, referred to above, has long been talked of, and will be eighty miles long. It is evident that a stronger line is back of the Lexington and Eastern in this matter. It is also generally understood that the Louisville and Atlantic, which was taken over recently by the Louisville and Nashville, will be extended into the mountains either immediately or not very far in the future.

Railroad extensions should be paying investments now to a much greater degree than they would have been a few years ago. In the first place, the coal produced by the Kentucky mines is now taken care of by consumption in markets fairly close by, and it is certain that new mines which would be opened through the proposed extensions would find an easy outlet for their coal.

The growing scarcity of timber all over the country will make the new sections opened by railroads of enormous value, and will enable Kentucky to take advantage of a lack of domestic hardwoods which is being felt by every consuming manufacturer and every lumberman. Incidentally, opening the country and transporting the logs will prove a profitable addition to the coal traffic which the railroads pushed into the Eastern Kentucky mountains are intended primarily to develop.

The Alleged Newspaper Subsidy.

[Indianapolis (Ind.) Star, Rep.

The idea of calling the second-class mail privilege a subsidy to newspapers was not original with President Taft. He borrowed it from the ship subsidy advocates, who are imploring us not to use that baleful word in connection with "ocean mail contracts." Borrowed or original, however, it does not promise to yield him any great renown. The day will probably come when he will regret its use in a message to Congress for two reason; first, the newspapers are carried at a profit instead of a loss; second, the only subsidy in the premises is the unnecessarily large contributions thus made to the railroads.

The government rate for carrying newspapers is 1 cent a pound. The express rate is one-half cent. Some of the railroads, where they carry newspapers packages direct without the intervention of the enormously prosperous express companies, are glad to do it for one-fourth cent a pound. Traction companies carry them for half a cent.

Daily newspapers, moreover, handle their packages themselves, without cost to the government. At the Star office, as at most offices, the packages are weighed, routed and carted directly to the trains, the only trouble the government sustains being to have a postal official present to inspect the weighing. The postoffice is out nothing for handling the papers, but it gets its 1 cent a pound.

Congress will not accept without inquiry the president's doctrine that the newspapers receive a postal subsidy. The Postoffice Committees of both House and Senate propose, on the contrary, to find out what truth there is in the generally accepted statement that the higher transportation rates charged the government than are charged the express companies, even with the enormous profits the express business pays, amounts in effect to a subsidy of $25,000,000 annually to the railroads.

The postal deficit is not caused by the newspapers, but what does cost the government a great deal is the immense volume of magazines and so-called periodicals, very largely made up of advertising matter, which it carries long distances across the country, whereas the newspaper goes almost wholly to points near its office of publication. There is an educational side to the problem, also, involving the public policy of encouragement for the dispensation of information through the daily press. The importance of thus faciliating popular knowledge was fully understood by Thomas Jefferson in this familiar and memorable passage from his writings:

"'The way to prevent these irregular inter-positions of the people (he referred to the government abuses of Europe) is to give them full information of these affairs through the channels of the public papers, and so contrive that these papers shall penetrate the whole mass of the people. The basis of our government being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right, and were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter. By that I should mean that every man should receive those papers and be capable of reading them.'"

Congress confronts an imperative duty to correct the abuses of second-class mail privileges not by newspapers, but by expensive magazine and fake periodicals, and see that the railroads are paid no more than proper rates for carrying the mails. It will hardly be diverted from this duty by the questionable expedient of complaint that the newspaper press is subsidized.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Over the Million Mark.

As citizens of Winchester we are naturally proud of the city's successful institutions. One of the most prominent of these, as well as one of the most successful, is the Winchester Bank. The assets and liabilities of this bank have grown from year to year until they have reached the proportions of a successful metropolitan bank. With deposits of nearly three quarters of a million, with loans and discounts to match, the total reaches over a million dollars. Very little of this stock is ever offered for sale, but when it is, it brings very high prices, attesting the high esteem in which the management is held. The officers are courteous and accommodating, the employes pleasant and capable, and all in all it is a pleasure to do business with this institution.—Winchester Democrat.

Mrs. Tom Haddix has been very sick for the past two or three months, but is slowly improving, and is able to sit up part of the time.

Mrs. Lula Kash has the thanks of our better seven-eighths for a bountiful lot of very delightful cake, consisting of black and white layer cakes. It was really a royal treat from a right royal friend. Also, a dish of frozen cream filled with every variety of fruits and nuts.

WHY GAS IS SHORT.

Gas Inadequate to Needs.

Owing to the heavy demand for gas and the unusual amount used by consumers the supply Thursday in a good many homes was wholly inadequate for heating and cooking purposes and much annoyance and trouble was experienced.—Lexington Herald, Dec. 31.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 31.—All trains from the east are late entering Pittsburg and mails are tied up. Gas shortage is reported everywhere, several mills of the steel plants closing on account of the shortage and throwing 500 men out of work.

During the day the charity institutions were swamped by calls for assistance.

We kindly call the attention of our citizens to the above clippings and admonish all to be patient with our local gas company. You will observe that Lexington and even Pittsburg have been and are suffering the same inconveniences that we are by the inexplainable failure of supply of natural gas, not a real failure of supply, but a failure to flow through pipes and mains. We presume Mt. Sterling and Winchester are not even aristocratic enough to be free from such periodical inconveniences.

Well Known in Hazel Green.

A private letter to Sam Wilson from Russellville, Ala., contained the following bit of news, clipped from a paper published in that town, which will be read with interest by the many friends of the bride in Hazel Green, where the family formerly resided.

QUILLIN-BRENNEMAN.

On last Sunday morning, Dec. 26, at 10:30 o'clock, at the Baptist pastorium, Mr. Wallace Quillin and Miss Cora Brenneman were united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Rev. J. W. Partridge speaking the beautiful and solemn words that blended the two happy hearts together as one for life.

The marriage was a quiet affair as two sisters of the bride and a few friends witnessed the ceremony and theytook their many friends by somewhat of a surprise.

The groom is a son of W. A. Quillin, a former well known citizen of this city, is a polished and genial young man, and his lovely bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Brenneman, is a beautiful and accomplished young lady. They both have many warm personal friends who wish for them a prosperous and happy voyage over the sea of wedded life.

The Hazel Green Glee Club.

The Hazel Green club rendered the drama "Out of Bondage" at Campton Saturday night, January 1, to a large audience. The play is one of the best ever given by the club. It is something similar to "Uncle Tom's Cabin," representing the ideas and customs of the people in the days of slavery.

Saturday was the first time they had played it in public and it was well received by the large crowd present. All played their part well and we can not specify any particular ones. Suffice it that there was not a mistake made so far as the audience could see. Indeed, they were cheered at the end of every scene.

The club desires to extend their thanks to the Campton people for the kindness they showed them while there.

Close of the Public School.

The public school at this place, which was taught by Misses Falay Long and Nancy Maple, closed Thursday, December 23. A very enjoyable entertainment was given Wednesday night, December 22, and was attended by a goodly number. The entertainment consisted of recitations, songs, papers and drills by the pupils. Prizes were awarded to the scholars who had attended school every day during the session, and the prizes were awarded to Carl and Lindon Kash, Dewey and Mae Rose, Iva and Lennie Hollon. The total enrollment was about 105.

Lost—Dec. 31, between Campton and Bethel one black leather hand bag containing two small purses and about $2.50 in silver and one note. Finders will please return to Edna Shackelford, Gosneyville, and receive reward.

Since G. W. Wheeler was qualified as judge of Hazel Green police court the evil doers are on the look out. He gives the boys good caution.

Mrs. Everett Back and little daughter, Hallie Day, of Cannel City, have been visiting Mrs. Back's father and mother, F. N. Day and wife, for the past week.

Andy Blankenship has moved his family into the W. T. Caskey, formerly Drew Godsey, place, in order to send his children to H. G. A. for an education.

Miss Nannie Brewer, who lives with the editor and his better seven-eighths, visited her father, Wm. Brewer, of Laurel, Sunday. Her escort was Ollie Murphy, of Grassy creek.

Hiram Blankenship killed a hog new year's day which netted 500 pounds. It was too heavy for the men to hang up so they laid it on the snow covered ground and disemboweled it.

Curtis Pieratt, of Grassy, has the thanks of the editor and his better seven-eighths for some nice eating apples and a fine pumpkin, from which we had some old fashioned Josh Billings pies.

The Hazel Green Glee Club will present their latest drama, "Out of Bondage," at the college building Saturday night, January 8. It is the best ever given by the club. Everybody will come out to see. You don't want to miss it.

After an absence of about a month at a sanitarium Spencer Cooper returned home last Sunday. Having sustained a very heavy fall on the ice covered concrete walks in Shelbyville, Ind., he is somewhat stove up this week. However, next week he expects to get on deck and take charge of THE HERALD and make it shine forth again in all its pristine glory.

A. J. Center, who left this county several years since, and who has been living at Old Albuquerque, New Mexico, died sometime last week. His remains were shipped back to his old home and the burial was Sunday or Monday, the interment being at his father's farm. He was a brother of Dr. G. M. Center and Boone Center, both residents of our town. The cause of death was tuberculosis, from which he had suffered several years.

THE HERALD has been much complimented on its corps of country correspondents, and this is one feature that adds greatly to the popularity of the paper. Most of our correspondents have been faithful and true with their weekly contributions and we wish to thank them for their efforts in making THE HERALD one of the most interesting newspapers in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky. We hope they will continue the work during the coming year and help to make THE HERALD more popular than ever by sending us all the news from their localities as early in the week as possible.

After examining 200 head of cattle in Mason county, W. F. Wyman, assistant state veterinarian, says he only found nine affected with tuberculosis.

Upon returning to his home near Upton, in Hardin county, Earl Ross was assaulted and knocked down by a thief who was concealed in the barn. He is in a serious condition.

Two young men, named Goodpaster and Kincaid, were out hunting in Bath county and were accidently shot by a third nimrod who did not know of the presence of the other two.

While Mrs. Will Lancaster, of Graves county, was out drawing a pail of water the clothing of her little three-year-old boy caught fire. Its eyes were burned out and its tongue burned to a crisp.

The large stock barn on the Patchen-Wilkes stock farm, near Lexington, was last week completely destroyed by fire, together with twenty-nine fine brood mares, entailing a loss estimated at $50,000.

John W. King, aged 19, and Mamie Blythe, aged 14, were married at Maysville, December 31, 1909. The youthful couple had the consent of their parents, and the bride was accompanied by her father

A five-year-old daughter of Andrew Taylor, a farmer, living four miles west of Owingsville, fell into a kettle of hot water at her home and was severely, if not fatally, scalded before aid could reach her.

James Singleton, a Bourbon county farmer, sold his tobacco in Paris and displayed a large roll of bills in a saloon. He was soon afterwards found in an unconscious condition with his head badly cut and minus his roll.

Again the open grate fire comes to the front, this time being Mrs. Mary Blevins, of Bath county, whose clothes caught fire from an open fireplace and before aid could be rendered was so badly burned that death may ensue.

Sherman Hunt, a young man living near Owingsville, was examining a pistol that he knew wasn't loaded when it was discharged, the ball striking a boy named Lee McCasty in the thigh, making a painful and dangerous wound.

M. C. Rankin, commissioner of agriculture, is working on the program for the State Farmers Institute which meets in Frankfort the latter part of February. He has secured several good lecturers and many others have agreed to be present.

Oscar Hinton, a student at the Louisville Medical college, who was shot in the mouth by a highwayman, in a fit of coughing, coughed the bullet out of his mouth. Physicians had failed to locate the missile and say he may die. His home is in Paris.

Robert Walters, a resident of Larue county, was accidently shot and killed while hunting. He was walking over a patch of ice when he fell and his gun was discharged. He died a few hours after at the home of a farmer, where he had been taken.

Emmett Craycraft, a young Mason county farmer, accidently shot and killed himself while hunting. He had climbed over a fence and was pulling his gun through when it was discharged. The entire load struck him in the face and the top of his head was blown off.

The edifice of the Methodist church, South, at Paris, was completely destroyed by fire last week. The church was dedicated in 1897 and cost over $20,000. The last payment was made about three years ago in the presence of the entire congregation. Insurance, $6,000. Steps have already been taken to rebuild.

A herd of feeding cattle belonging to Reese Owings, of Bath county, got into a field in which tobacco had been grown the past season and as a result of eating the stalks six of them died. Whether the tobacco killed them or whether some of the paris green which had been used on the weed still lingered in the stalk is not known.

Students of the Kentucky Normal and Industrial Institute, at Frankfort, are developing a taste for manual training and are showing a decided tendency toward skilled labor pursuits, so reports the president of the college, and he wants the legislature to give him more money so that he can make better mechanics of the students.

C. C. Folge, an aged carpenter, warned his wife not to visit James R. Eaton in his shoe shop, near their home in Lexington. She went. Fogle found her there and struck Eaton with a club. Eaton shot Fogle in the thigh. Fogle limped home, got a gun, came back and filled Eaton with buckshot. Both men are in the hospital.

Nervous Prostration

"I suffered so with Nervous Prostration that I thought there was no use trying to get well. A friend recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and although skeptical at first, I soon found myself recovering, and am to-day well."

MRS. D. I. JONES,
5800 Broadway, Cleveland, O.

Much sickness is of nervous origin. It's the nerves that make the heart force the blood through the veins, the lungs take in oxygen, the stomach digest food, the liver secrete bile and the kidneys filter the blood. If any of these organs are weak, it is the fault of the nerves through which they get their strength. Dr. Miles' Nervine is a specific for the nerves. It soothes the irritation and assists in the generation of nerve force. Therefore you can hardly miss it if you take Dr. Miles' Nervine when sick. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

CIRCULATION, - - - 200,000

Popular in Every State.

The seventy-fourth year of its existence finds the Toledo Blade more popular than at any period of its remarkable career. It is now read each week by more than a million people. Its field is not circumscribed by State boundaries, but involves the length and breadth of the United States, giving it an unquestionable right of claiming to be the greatest national weekly newspaper in the country.

The Weekly Blade is distinctly a family newspaper. The one object of its publishers has always been to make it fit for the American home, for the fireside, and of interest to every member of the family. To fulfill this purpose it is kept clean and wholesome. The news of the world is handled in a comprehensive manner, and the various departments of The Blade are edited with painstaking care. The Household page is a delight to the women and children; current affairs are treated editorially without prejudice; the serial stories are selected with the idea of pleasing the greating number of fiction lovers; the Question Bureau is a scrapbook of information; the Farmstead columns are conducted with the purpose of giving the patrons a medium for the exchange of ideas and information on farm topics. No department is neglected, but every feature is taken care of with the idea of making The Blade worth many times the price of subscription—one dollar a year.

Long Delays by Open Water — Drifting on Floes—Dogs Sacrificed and Sleds Abandoned

[TWELFTH ARTICLE]

In my wakeful watches to get a peep of the sun at just the right moment I was kept awake during much of the resting period, and for pastime my eyes wandered from snorting dogs to snoring men. During one of these idle moments there came a solution of the utility of the dog's tail, a topic with which I had been at play for several days. It is quoted here at the risk of censure, because it is a typical phase of our lives which cannot be illustrated otherwise. Seeming trivialities were seized upon as food for thought. Why has the dog a tail at all? The bear, the musk ox, the caribou and the hare each in its own way succeeds very well with but a dwarfed stub. Why does nature in the dog expend its best effort in growing the finest fur over a seemingly useless line of tail bones? The thing is distinctive, and one could hardly conceive of the creature without this accessory, but nature in the arctic does not often waste energy to display beauties and temperament. This tail must have an important use, otherwise it would soon fall under the knife of frost and time. Yes! It was imported into the arctic by the wolf progenitor of the dog from warmer lands, where its swing served a useful purpose in fly time. A nose made to breathe warm air requires some protection in the far north. No animal feels this shortcoming as much as man. The dog supplied the need with his tail. At the time when I made this discovery a cold wind charged with cutting crystals brushed the pack. Each dog had his back arched to the wind and his face veiled with an effective curl of his tail. He was comfortably shielded from icy torment by an appendage adapted to that very purpose.

THE MUSK OXEN OF JONES SOUND.

A Heavy Snowstorm.

On May 6 we were stopped at 6 a. m. by the coming of the gloom of an unusual gale. The wind had been steady and strong all night, but we did not heed its threatening increase of force until too late. It came from the west, as usual, driving coarse snow with needle points. The ice about was old and hummocky, offering a difficult line of march, but some shelter. In the strongest blasts we threw ourselves over the sled behind hummocks and gathered new breath to force a few miles more.

Finally, when no longer able to force the dogs through the blinding drift, we sought the lee of an uplifted block of ice. Here suitable snow was found for a snow house, and a few blocks were cut and set, but the wind swept them away like chips. The tent was tried, but it could not be made to stand in the rush of the roaring tumult. In sheer despair we crept into the tent without erecting the pole. Creeping into the bags, we then allowed the flapping silk to be buried by the drifting snow. Soon the noise and discomfort of the storm were lost, and we enjoyed the comfort of an icy grave. An efficient breathing hole was kept open, and the wind was strong enough to sweep off the weight of a dangerous drift. A new lesson was thus learned in fighting the battle of life which was afterward useful.

Several days of icy despair now followed each other in rapid succession. The wind did not rise to the full force of a storm, but it was too strong and too cold to travel. The food supply was noticeably decreasing. The daily advance was reduced. With such weather starvation seemed inevitable.

Camp was moved nearly every day, but ambition sank to the lowest ebb. To the atmospheric unrest were added the instability of broken ice and the depressing mystery of an unknown position. For many days no observations had been possible, and our location could only be guessed at.

The maddening struggle was daily forced, while the spirits were pressed to the verge of extinction. Now that the object of our trip had been accomplished much of the incentive was gone. At times it seemed as if our life's work had been accomplished and to have lain down for the final sleep would have been easy, but the feeble fires of the homing passion kept the eye open.

At the Eighty-fourth Parallel.

On May 24 the sky cleared long enough to give us a set of observations. We were on the eighty-fourth parallel, near the ninety-seventh meridian. The new lands were hidden behind a low mist. The ice was much crevassed and drifted eastward.

The pack was sufficiently active to give us considerable anxiety, though pressure lines and open water did not then seriously impede our progress.

There remained on the sleds scarcely enough food to reach our caches unless we averaged fifteen miles daily. On the return from the pole to here we had only been able to make twelve miles daily. Now our strength, even under fair conditions, did not seem to be equal to more than ten miles. The outlook was far from hopeful to me, though the sight of the cleared sky infused new courage into Etukishuk and Ahwelah.

Trying to make the best of our hard lot, a straight course was set for the musk ox lands of the inner crossing.

At the eighty-third parallel we found ourselves to the west of a large tract extending southward. The ice changed to small fields. The temperature rose to zero, and a persistent mist obscured the heavens.

With a few lines on paper to register the life of suffering, the food for man and dog was reduced to a three-quarter ration, while the difficulties of ice travel rose to disheartening heights.

At the end of a struggle of twenty days through thick fog the sky cleared, and we found ourselves far down in Crown Prince Gustav sea, with open water and impossible small ice as a barrier between us and Heiberg island.

With the return to Annootok rendered impossible by the unfortunate westerly drift, our only alternative was to go south with the ice. We hoped in this course to find game for food and fuel. The Scottish whalers enter Lancaster sound and touch at Port Leopold. The distance to this point was shorter than that to Greenland, and by this route I hoped that I could return to Europe during the same year, 1908.

Passing through Hassel sound between the Ringnes Lands bears and seals were secured, and slowly we moved southward over Norwegian bay into Wellington channel. The ice was small, there was much open water, and progress was slow, but the drift carried us along.

At Pioneer bay we were stopped by a jam of small ice over which sledding was impossible. Unable to wait for the ice to move because no large game was here secured, we crossed in early July to Jones sound. Here, again, no big game was found. There was much open water, and the folding canvas boat was spread for use.

Unable to feed the dogs, they were given the freedom of their wild progenitors, the wolves.

One sled was left here; the other was taken apart and placed in the boat. Then followed a long and perilous adventure by boat and sled, during which our last ammunition was expended in securing birds for food. After that, by looped lines and slingshots, birds were still captured.

Early in September we were beset on the shores of Baffin bay with neither food, fuel nor ammunition. New implements were shaped, and we returned westward to Cape Sparbo to seek a place to pitch a winter camp. An underground den was built of stones, bones and turf, and with our primitive weapons we fought the walrus, the bear, the musk ox and other animals. Thus food, fuel and skins were secured, and death by famine was averted.

The winter and the night of 1908-9 were spent preparing food and equipment for the return.

On Feb. 18, 1909, we started with a remodeled sled and reached our camp at Annootok in the middle of April. Here I met Mr. Harry Whitney and told him of our conquest of the pole.

Because a ship was to come after Mr. Whitney to take him direct to home shores, most of my instruments were intrusted to his care. Anxious to gain a few months in the return home, I proceeded by sled over land and sea southward to Upernavik and from there onward to Copenhagen by Danish steamers.
